What's in it for you?

More efficient, satisfied, enthusiastic employees

- Workers who Rideshare are far less likely to arrive to work late than workers driving alone.
- Companies that offer commute options and incentives are perceived by their employees as more supportive.
- Businesses that pay for parking spaces save money for every space not used.
- Employees arrive at work feeling more relaxed and ready to start work.
- Rideshare matching is a free service, which employers can pass on to their employees as part of an overall benefit package.

Tax credits are available for qualifying businesses.

What's in it for your employee?

The benefits are obvious...

- Carpoolers/vanpoolers save an average of $2,000 per year on gas, maintenance, and insurance by sharing a ride.
- Add to that the saved expense of a parking space.
- Commuters who can't afford a solo commute can pool resources.

A rideshare participant doesn't miss time when his or her car needs repair.

...and not so obvious.

- Sharing the driving means added productive time – allowing commuters to read, work or nap on the way.
- Rideshare commuters benefit from sharing information with pool members – networking during “downtime.”
